Crisis Conversations: A Trauma Informed Care Approach

(5.5 Credit Hours)

DATE: January 5, 2023

Gaines, Laura

TIME: 9:00 am – 4:00 pm

CONTENT: Just as trauma is defined as something that is overwhelming, crisis conversations are those that may overwhelm your internal or external resources. Topics such as suicidal ideation, self-harming, rage, extreme helplessness, or violence can be overwhelming. And just as trauma is personal, a crisis conversation can be a conversation that hits us the wrong way, at the wrong time. Trauma Informed Care involves a full 360-degree approach to crisis conversations. At its most basic, a trauma-informed approach realizes the prevalence of trauma; recognizes how trauma affects all individuals involved with the system, including its own workforce; and responds by putting this knowledge into practice (SAMHSA, 2012). Having a trauma-informed response to crisis conversations includes a large set of skills that can be learned or improved upon. At the end of this workshop, you will have a crisis conversation worksheet to use in practice so that you are better prepared for the conversations to come.
